FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

THURSDAY, Nov. 30. All the stock and commodity markets were closed in this country to-day and the dealing in London for New York account was small. American stocks in London showed only slight changes from Wednes-day's prices here. Reading scored the chief advance, rising 1% points. Erie was off a quarter on the uncertainty attending the sale of the C., H. & D. The announcement of the extension of the St. Paul to the Pacific Coast was still reflected in a small advance, and Union Pacific was another issue that slightly more than kept its own. The weekly statement of the Bank of England, published to-day, shows that the proportion of the bank's reserve to liability this week is 41.75 per cent., as compared with 41.08 per cent. last week. The rate of discount remains unchanged at 4 per cent. Total reserve increased £410,000, circulation inreeased £175,000, bullion increased £585,236, other securities decreased £375,000, other deposits increased £777,000, public deposits decreased £679,000, notes reserve increased £375,000; Government securities remain unchanged. The rate of discount of the Bank of Bengal of Calcutta was raised to-day from 6 to 7 per cent. Consols were strong in London.

SUICIDE AMNOBLE JAP?

Yamaki, Who Was Married in June, Found Dead in the Words.

NORTHPORT, L. I., Nov. 30 .- The body of Frank Yamaki, who had been missing from home since November 5, was found to-day in the woods outside the village. It is believed the autopsy will show that the young man took poison. Yamaki was married on June 16 last, and a few days before he disappeared had some trouble with his wife.

Mrs. Yamaki, who is the daughter of Edward E. Brown of 26 Spencer place, Brooklyn, said last night she believed that her husband had committed suicide, because of a real or fancied conviction that he would be punished by the Japanese Govreturn home when war was declared on Russia. ## FIDDLER LURED HER AWAY.

BELLE OF SUGAR RUN FOUND THE GAY STAGE LIFE SAD.

Abandoned Nursing at Morris Plains for the Footlights and a Promise of Marriage, Not Yet Made Good Found by Old Father, Who'll Take Her Home.

Postmaster Horton of the village of Sugar Run, Pa., a gray haired little old man with a kindly face, stood at the railing of Magistrate Wahle's bench in Jefferson Market court yesterday morning with his arm around the waist of his daughter Genevieve. As he talked to the Magistrate, pressing a charge of abduction against Edward J. Kingsland, a travelling musician, the old man patted his daughter's shoulder and every now and then wiped his eyes with a very large handkerchief. He told his story in a low voice. He seemed to feel keenly the circumstances which compelled a plain old farmer to stand before a crowd of staring malefactors and curiosity seekers and tell such a story.

The daughter, who is 17 and very pretty, kept close to her father, but she glanced quite frequently toward the fiddler, and her glances were hardly unfriendly. She wore a close fitting brown coat and a big red hat. Her hair was a soft brown. Her eyes were blue and a red spot burned in each cheek. Kingsland, charged with abduction, stood up very straight, and his face never changed a muscle while the old man and the girl were telling their stories to the Magistrate.

In October, it appeared, Genevieve, who was quite the prettiest girl in Sugar Run, went to Morris Plains, N. J., to study to become a nurse. Sugar Run was deadly slow. If a girl had a young man calling on her more than two nights a week there just broke their necks getting on their hats and shawls and running to the village millinery store so they could start a scandal. If a girl went driving with a young fellow she was pretty certain to get a reputation for being fast-"very different, my dear, from the girls of our day," the old women

Besides that, Genevieve had a stepmother who scolded her a good deal. Her father thought it was all right when she left home to become a nurse. He was pretty fixed, owning a couple of farms in Bradford county, so he gave her some money and told her to be a good girl and write often. She went to Morris Plains and studied hard.

Then Kingsland came along, playing in and thirty cent thriller. Genevieve, with two or three other fledgling nurses, went to the show. Kingsland got more of her attention than the blond hero. The fiddler's mustache was very fetching and he had in his eye a devil of a look. After the show, so the old man told the Magistrate, Kingsland met Genevieve and took her to supper "She was just as good a girl as th "She was just as good a girl as there was in the world. Judge," said old Horton, while the tears rolled down his cheeks. "She never had a thought of wrong. She was just eager for excitement, like girls are everywhere, and this fellow bewitched her. She's good enough for me yet, because she's my little girl, and when this is all over I am going to take her home and make her forget she ever had such trouble."

That set several women in the courtroom sniffling and fumbling with their hand-kerchiefs. Some of them did not look as if they would be susceptible to such senti-Even the Magistrate, who has heard scores of such stories, was more than a little

The fiddler told the girl, the father said, that she was too pretty to waste her life in such humdrum work as nursing sick babies and cross old men. He told her that he had a great pull with the theatrical managers in New York; that all he had to do was walk into a manager's office and ask that a contract he given her as a real actress and walk into a manager's office and ask that a contract be given her as a real actress and the thing would be done. It sounded well to Genevieve. She listened to tales of Broadway and the lobster palaces until according to her father, she lost her head. Kingsland, so she said, persuaded her to go with him to a hotel that night in Morris Plains. She asked him if he would marry her, and he promised to do so she told the Maris. and he promised to do so, she told the Magistrate. Then, as was its habit, the thriller moved on, taking with it the fiddler. The show came here shortly afterward and Kingsland wrote the little nurse, telling her he had got her a job with his show and asking her to come to this city at once. She came here on November 1, and Kingsland here the Askingd House results. She came here on November 1, and Kingsland took her to the Ashland House, registering as man and wife. She demanded a separate room, she says, but Kingsland told her it was all right, they would go out with the show and then get married.

"And she believed it all, Judge," said her father. "She never suspe ted that he was lying to her. She was just crazy to be an actress and wear fine clothes."

The show started out, but a hoodoo sat

The show started out, but a hoodoo sat

The show started out, but a boodoo sat on the manager's nerk and worked sixty to the minute. They played New Haven and Hartford and smaller towns, and Gene-vieve found out in short order that being on the stage wasn't half as pretty as it sounded. It was squalld and dirty, and she heard women say things, quite as a matter of course, that made her ears burn. Finally, at Middletown, the show went to the bad, and Genevieve lost her trunk. Then Kingsland brought her here again

Then Kingsland brought her here again and put her in a furnished room house at 263 West Twenty-fourth street. He was away a good deal, saying he was visiting his sister. The police don't think it was a

Genevieve got blue and discouraged, and wrote to a chum in Sugar Run a letter which was very weepy and downhearted. The chum showed it to Mr. Horton, who came to New York in h hurry. He went around to the West Twentieth street station and asked the police to help him. He showed the desk sergeant a picture of Genevieve in her confirmation dress and enlisted the sympathy of the detectives to such an extent that they did some real hustling. They found Genevieve, who cried and was mighty found Genevieve, who cried and was niggry glad to see her father, and they arrested Kingsland. The girl didn't want to charge him with abduction. She told her father she still had faith in him, but the old man was angry and had Kingsland taken to Magistrate Wahle sent Genevieve to the House of Detention until to-morrow morning, when he will go deeper into the case. Kingsland was held in $3,500 bail. "Just give me a chance to take her home, Judge." said the old man. "She is a good girl and I believe in her."

Jobs for Anti-Fagan Men.

Thomas P. Connolly of Jersey City was appointed warden of the Hudson county jail by Sheriff John C. Kaiser of Hudson county yesterday. The new warden was an adherent of Col. Samuel D. Dickinson, the Republican leader in the Dickinson-Fagan feud during the last campaign. Connolly announced the appointment last night of John Reilly, a Spanish war veteran, as one of the keepers at the jail. Reilly as one of the keepers at the Jah. Relly was recently bounced by City Hall Custodian James Connolly, Mayor Fagan's cousin, as one of the firemen in the City Hall. The Connollys are not related.

No More Dollar-a-Line for Smith. It is understood that Charles J. Smith. "Dollar a Line Smith," will shortly retire as "literary agent" of the Mutual Life. The reorganization forces in the Mutual, it was said yesterday, feel that they can dispense with Mr. Smith's services. Mr. Smith is the recently elected president of the Press Club.

DIVORCE SUIT QUERIES RULED OUT IN POLICE COURT.

THUMPED, BUT SERVED PAPERS

Man Who Says He's Brown Not Held for Smashing Process Server's Hat Thought He Might Hurt the Lady Mrs. Silverman Gets a Summons.

Lawrence Wolf, a process server, 1384 Fifth avenue, appeared in the Yorkville court yesterday to prosecute a young man calling himself Henry Brown, whose arrest he caused on Wednesday evening on a charge of thumping him when he tried to serve a divorce summons on a woman. Brown was in court too. He is a smooth faced, athletic looking young chap. He said in court that he was a promoter and lived in Newark.

On the bridge with the defendant's lawyer stood a tall, blue eyed woman, of comely features, whose tight fitting gown set off her figure to advantage. When called as a witness she gave the name of Grace L. Silverman. She was the woman were at least two ancient females that whom Wolf wanted to serve. Before the case came up for examination Lawyer Otto Glasberg of 132 Nassau street said that he had been retained by Joseph Silverman, who is in business at Broadway and White street, to bring an action against her in the Supreme Court for divorce. According to the lawyer, she had been Grace L. Mowrey until Silverman married her in 1888. The couple lived happily until last August, when the Silvermans were in a restaurant one day. The young man who was the defendant in court was there too. The lawyer said that Mr. Silverman there had his suspicions aroused, and shortly afterward a separation took place.

Wolf has been chasing after the woman for a month, but could not get near enough the orchestra of a barnstorming ten twenty | to her to serve the papers. When the examination started he told the Magistrate that he had received a tip that Mrs. Silverman was to be at Second avenue and Forty-fifth street on Wednesday evening. He went there with the summons in his pocket.

He continued: saw the woman and this defendant talking together on the sidewalk, and I approached and served the summons on her. The man snatched the paper out of her, The man snatched the paper out of her hand and then whacked me on top of the head. The blow forced my hat down over my eyes and I heard the man call out to the woman: 'Beat it! beat it!' While out to the woman: 'Beat it! beat it!' While I was trying to get the hat from over my eyes the man hit me a punch in the face. However, I got the hat from my eyes in time to see the woman running like a deer. She went into the corner saloon. The man had the summons in his hands. I caught hold of him and held him until Policeman Killiuff came up and arrested him on my charge of assault."

The defendant said he had accidentally

The defendant said he had accidentally met Mrs. Silverman, and while talking to her a man rushed up, caught her by the arm and cried out: "Now I've got you." The defendant continued:

"I thought the stranger was a crazy man and might injure the lady. I caught hold of him and told the lady to get out of harm's way. I didn't tell her to run away. I didn't know he was a process server."
"Is your name Brown and do you live in Newark?" Lawyer Glasberg asked him. "I object," Lawyer Nugent hastened to Same objection and same ruling.

"Do you know a bookmaker by the name Objection sustained.

"Did you sign the name of Brown to your ball bond?"

"Now, counsel," remarked the Magistrate, "there is no use in fishing for evidence in a divorce case here. This is simply a charge of assault."

Mrs. Silverman testified that Brown had simply tried.

a charge of assault."

Mrs. Silverman testified that Brown had simply tried to protect her from what appeared to be the actions of an insane man. She did not run away, she asserted, nor were any court papers served on her. She was sure that Brown did not assault the mer.

the man.

The Magistrate dismissed the complaint, When Mrs. Silverman left the court the process server stepped up to her and handed her a notice of the divorce suit.

"You have the papers now," he said to

GERMAN NURSES GRADUATE And Catch Some Winged Words of Advice From President Zinsser.

Sixteen "schwesters" were graduated from the German Hospital training school for nurses yesterday after a three years course of instruction. They are called sisters, although the organization is not a religious body.

August Zinsser, president of the board August Zinsser, president of the board of trustees, in his address gave winged words of advice to the novices:

"Don't coddle patients simply because you are tender hearted," he said. "Don't tell what you see and hear in the homes of patients; it will injure you and your calling. Don't feel above pitching in and thing processary work even though it is ing. Don't feel above pitching in and doing necessary work, even though it is not directly in your line."

After the exercises Russian tea was served by damsels dressed in Slavonic costumes and hovering about steaming samovars.

Montreal, Canada, Nov 30th, 1905.—The new "Style B" Linotype machine, which has been under construction for some time here, is now completed and arrangements have heen made to exhibit the machines in Chicago, San Francisco and New York in February next. An American Company will be formed at once to manufacture the new Linotype machines on a large scale with Three Milkon Dollars capital (30,000 shares of $100.00 each, divided into 15,000 shares. The preference and 15,000 ordinary shares. The preference and 15,000 ordinary shares. The preference shares, after receiving 6% dividends with the ordinary shares after the latter have received ten per cent. The preference shares only will be offered, and these at a premium, namely, $110.00 for each $100.00 share.

The new Company will acquire patents and rights in Canada, the United States and in South and Central America, Mexico, Cuba and in Germany, Austria, Switzerland and 20 other countries. The price of the new Linotype machines is to be $1,750.00 each. It is estimated that at least twelve hundred to fifteen hundred machines a year can be easily marketed for vears to come, which will enable the Company to pay very large dividends. The new Company is to take over the real estate, machine shops, merchandise and other assets of the Canadian-American Linotype Corporation, Limited, and an associated company, which are of an estimated value of nearly a Million Dollars outside of the very large value of the patents and rights upon the new "Style B" Linotype rachines, which have from 15 to 17 years to run in the various countries. The prospectus will be issued at an early date. The Canadian-American Linotype Corporation, Limited, and an advance copy of prospectus should send their addresses to the Secretary of the Canadian-American Linotype Corporation, Limited, and Linotype Corporation, Limited, and the Secretary of the Canadian-American Linotype Corporation, Limited, Canada.—Adv.

TO CALL HENDRICKS AND PAYN. Armstrong Committee Proposes to Examine State Insurance Department.

With only a month remaining before the Legislature assembles, the Armstrong insurance committee finds itself facing more work than it can do in that period. The committee has done scarcely anything yet with the numerous assessment companies it has not touched the affairs of the fraternal organizations and it has not investigated the State Insurance Department.

The examination into the affairs of the State Insurance Department is regarded by many as the most necessary and important work that can come before the commission. "This is not a divorce proceeding, and the defendant need not answer," ruled the Magistrate.
"On October 26, when Roundsman Costigan raided an alleged poolroom on Deystreet, were you there, and did you give the police the name of Cullen?" was the next question from the complainant's counsel.

This line of questioning will be due to the many stories which have come to the committee of the power of Fields, the Mu-tual's legislative agent, and other repre-sentatives of the big companies in naming the examiners and workers in the depart-ment. The committee has been told even that the big companies have dictated the ap-resistment of State Superintendents, and that the big companies have dictated the appointment of State Superintendents and that various Superintendents have been known as the Equitable's man, the Mutual's man or the New York Life's man.

The only thing that the committee fears in undertaking the investigation of the Insurance Department is lack of time. The life of the committee expires on January 1, and in order to continue the inquiry it would be necessary for the new Legislature either to grant the present committee a would be necessary for the new Legislatine either to grant the present committee a new lease of life or appoint a new body.

Mr. Hughes desires that the work shall be concluded in the allotted time, and he will make every effort to accomplish this, but it is understood that he will stand out against the sacrifices of any facts in such an effort.

MARRIED INTO AMERICA.

Miss Mayer Didn't Expect Anything So Sudden, but Raised No Objection. When the Friedrich der Grosse tied up at her pier in Hoboken yesterday morning a young woman who was down on the first cabin passenger list as Sofie Mayer stord at the rail, evidently expecting somebody. Down on the dock Solly Neuberger, who lives at 200 St. Ann's avenue, was knocking his heels together.
"Solly," cried Miss Mayer from the deck.

Solly heard and he tried to board the ship Soily heard and he tried to board the ship as soon as the gangplank was down, but they wouldn't let him. Neither would the immigration men let Miss Mayer land, although she was a first cabin passenger. "It's all right," said Solly. "She came on here especially to marry me, and I am very well able to support her."

The inspectors wanted more than his word for it.

"I'll marry her right here now," said But it was Thanksgiving Day in Hoboken and ministers were busy. Then M. A. Raab of the Lutheran Mission offered to make himself responsible for the young make himself responsible for the young woman and brought her over to the mission on State street. Solly came along.

At the mission was the Rev. Gustav Doering. Yes, he would marry them. Then he gazed intently at Mr. Neuberger.

"Are you a Christian?" he asked.
"Not so that you could notice it." replied

"Not so that you could notice it," replied Solly. "But Miss Mayer is." "Maybe there might be some children after a while what will they be?" Solly looked at Miss Mayer. She looked yay. Solly answered for her:
"Anything you say, so long as we ge

VERTIGO ON THE ROOF. Earls Went Up for Air and Fell Down Airshaft Picked Up Dead.

After eating his Thanksgiving dinner last evening James Farls, a bookkeeper 26 years old, of 457 West Thirty-fifth street, went to the roof of the house in which he lived for a breath of air and a smoke.

While he sat on the cornice near the airshaft he was attacked with vertigo. He tumbled into the airshaft and dropped four stories to the basement. When he was picked up he was dead.
